CONSUL SAID TO

J. C. McNally, Now at Tsintau, China, Accused of Swindling American.

BRIBERY ALSO CHARGED

State Department Refused to Withdraw Nomination for Nuremberg. Confirmation Is Held Up.

A charge that he embezzled about $12,000 (Mexican currency) of an American citizen, and bribed and otherwise corrupted Chinese officials, is holding up the nomination of James C. McNaily, a Pittsburgh man, now consul at Tsintau, China, who has been named for a transfer to Nurembers, Bayaria. fer to Nuremberg, Bavaria.

fer to Nuremberg, Bavaria.

The nomination was sent to the Senate in February by the State Department, despite strong recommendations by the director of the consular service. Wilbur
J. Carr, that McNally be separated from the service. The department refuses to withdraw the nomination.

The original charges were brought against McNally about four years ago by Fleming D. Cheshire, consular inspecto at large, whose investigation and report furnished the American citizen, whom, it is claimed, McNally swindled, with the first inkling that everything was not all right. Mr. Carr's final report on the case contained the following:

"Upon carefully going over the evidence and carefully considering it with a letter Mr. Newman, the complainant, has written to the department, and a communication tion, with inclosures, which Newman ha written to Mr. Bennett, a lawyer in this city. I am convinced in my own mind that not only should McNally not be in the service, but that he would seem guilty of the charges made against him." Polk's New Code of Ethics.

Despite this report, Gov. Folk, when reporting on the case during his incum-bency as Solicitor of the State Depart-ment, in a memorandum approved by the Secretary, declared that there had been no substantiation of the charges. Folk thereupon promulgated the following new code of thics for consular of 'It is claimed that this $500 and $1.000 referred to above were paid to Chinese officials in order to secure official acts, and Mr. Newman makes the point that even if the money was used for the purpose for which he gave it to McNally, that such use of it constituted bribery, and renders McNally guilty of that crime. * * It is sufficient to say that, while these acts might be bribery according to American standards, the situation in China is quite different. In China at that time it seems that officials were com-pensated in this manner, while in this country, where officials are paid by the public, such things are denounced by law as venal. In considering this case I think it best to view according to the conditions existing in China, where the acts complained of are alleged to have been committed, rather than under the ethics of this republic. Measured by the Chinest gauge of moral conduct, and un-der the circumstances surrounding the consul at the time. I do not think these acts are sufficient to impeach him as

"My conclusion, therefore, is that the question as to whether the charges have been sustained must be answered in the

McNally got wind of the matter and trote Cheng, it is stated, an extremely evere reprimand for attempting to newith an American citizen and not through the consulate. Then he wired Newman to call off negotiations, leave everything in his hands, and let him boost the price. Ultimately, it is de-ciared, the price was boosted to $28,000, the government officials think Newman was the cause of the advance. McNaily claims that Cheng got the "rake-off." The record shows that the purchase price, 20,000 tacls, was first paid in one draft; that this latter was changed by McNally to four 5,000 tael drafts, two of which were deposited to Newman's ac-count, one changed and given, in part to Newman, and one 5,000 tael draft deposited to McNally's account in his own bank, the International Banking Cor-

After thus protesting his desire to pro-tect the viceroy, he continued in his crossexamination: "Yes, I turned back the difference,

Charges of Bribers

This is one of the instances of alleged bribery which the State Department con-dones as a custom of the country. One of the charges against McNally was that he drew on the United State was that he drew on the United States covernment for pay of his official servants, received the money in United States currency and paid the servants in Mexican currency, which represents only one-half the value. McNaily admited further, according to review of the charges against him by Consular Director Carr, that "on one occasion, when the clerk was first employed, and was not then Acknowledgment by Cheng.

Yesterday was a day of hilarity in the nd harbors in their districts and those who failed to get recognition in the pend-ing river and harbor bill, attacked the measure in a spirit of jocularity that got on the nerves of those who take the legislation seriously.

For example, Representative Calloway, of Texas, who has been 'picking' on the river and harbor bill for the last few days, threw up his hands in horror when the item appropriating $17,000 for the Kissimme River in Florida was reached. WESTERN STATES ARE INIMICAL

The Eastern railways that have applied for authority to increase their rates gained a point yesterday when the Interstate Commerce Commission announced that it would accord the railway managers another chance to present additional testimony concerning their financial requirements and also give them an opportunity to reply to those who are fighting the proposed advances. The commission will hear the railway managers March 30 and 31, and continue the hearings April 30, 21 and 22, if necessary. These hearings were fixed because of the action of Clifford Thorn, of Iowa, who appeared before the commission as the spokesman of eight Western States that are fighting the application of the Eastern railways. The Western States are opposed to the advances on the ground that if the commission decides this case in the affirmative the Western railroads also will seek authority to raise freight charges.
